THE CHILD AND THE LION.

FROM GOETHE.

Translated from the German by W. Wood, B. A. Wallingford, W. F. Honan and A. L. Glascock, of Maysville Literary Institute.

Entering the peaceful valley, not regarding its refreshing coolness, they had scarcely descended a few steps near the sparkling spring of the adjacent flowing brook, when the princess perceived something singular below in the groves of the meadow valley, which she immediately recognized as a tiger; springing on, as she had a short time before seen him painted, he came towards her, and this resemblance to the fearful pictures which had just engaged so, made the most wonderful impression. "Flee, gracious lady," exclaimed Honoria, "flee!" She turned her horse around towards the steep mountain, whence they had descended. But the youth went towards the animal, drew his pistol and shot when he thought himself near enough; yet, alas he had missed his aim, the tiger sprang sideways, the horse faltered, but the infuriated animal pursued its way upwards directly towards the princess. She galloped on as fast as the horse was able up this steep, stony place, scarcely fearing that a tender creature unaccustomed to such exertion would hold out. It overdid itself, spurred on by the excited rider, stumbled on the small gravel of the steep again and again, and at last plunged headlong, after a violent effort, powerless to the ground. The beautiful lady, determined and dexterous, did not fail, she hastily rose to her feet, also the horse arose, but the tiger, already approached, although not with violent swiftness. The uneven ground, the sharp stones appeared to hinder his impetuosity, and only Honoria, flying directly after him, riding up near him with checked speed, appeared to goad and provoke his strength anew. Both runners reached the place at the same time, where the princess stood by her horse. The Knight bent himself down, fired and with the second pistol shot the monster through the head, so that it immediately fell down, and lay stretched out its full length, first rightly revealed its might and fearfulness, of which only the bodily hull remained lying there.

Honoria, had sprung from his horse, and already knelt upon the animal, suppressed its last motions and held his drawn cutlass in his right hand. The prince was handsome, he had come galloping on, as the princess had often seen him in the sports of the Lance and Ring.

"Make an end of him" said the princess.

"I fear he may injure you yet with his claws."

"Pardon me!" answered the youth, "he is already dead enough, and I would not spoil the skin which shall shine upon your sleigh next winter." "Sport not!" said the princess; "all piety which abides deep in the heart, discloses itself in such a moment." "Oh! exclaimed Honoria, I was never more pious than just now, but on that account I think of what is most joyful. I look at this skin only as it can accompany you to do you pleasure." "It would always remind me of this fearful moment," she answered. "It is yet, answered the youth, an innocent trophy, as if the weapons of the slain enemy were carried before the victors." "I shall remember at sight of it your coolness and dexterity and I need not add, that you, may count upon my thanks and upon the good will of the Prince all your life." But arise; there is no more life in the animal, let us think of what to do next!" "There know, kneel once," answered the youth, "and I find myself in a position which would be forbidden in any other circumstance, so let me beg this woman to be assured of the good will, of the grace, which you vouchsafe me. I have already so often begged your exalted husband for permission to extend my travels further. He who has the fortune to sit at your table whom you honor, to share your company, must have seen the world."

"Arise!" repeated the princess, "I would not willingly beg and wish anything whatever against the will of my husband; but if I do not err, the reason is why he has detained you until now is soon to be removed. His design was to see you ripened into a self dependent nobleman, who might make for yourself and himself honor abroad, as now at court, and should think your deed would be as recommendatory a passport, as a young man can take with him into the world."

The princess had not time to notice that instead of a youthful joy, a certain sadness passed over his countenance, nor he to give vent to his feeling, for hastily up the mountain there came a woman with a boy on her side directly to the group, whom we know, and scarcely had Honoria arisen when she threw herself down howling and crying over the corpse, and by this action, as well as by her clean, though becoming, dignified, yet parti-colored and singular dress, led me immediately to believe, that she was the female mistress and keeper of the creature stretched out there, likewise the black-eyed, dark haired boy, who held a flute in his hand, weeping like the mother, but less violently, but deeply touched, knelt near her.

A stream of words, as a brook plunging intermittingly from rock to rock, followed the violent outbreaks of passion of this unhappy woman, interrupted indeed by fits and starts. A natural language short and broken, made itself impressive and touching; though we would wish in vain to translate it into our dialect, we need not omit the approximate purport of it. "They have murdered three, poor animal! murdered without need! Thou wast tame, and wouldst have willingly, quietly laid thyself down and waited for us; for thy footballs pained thee, and thy claws had no more strength! The hot sun was wanting to thee, to mature them. Thou wast the most beautiful of thy kind, who has ever seen a kingly tiger so gloriously stretched out in sleep, as thou now liest here, dead, never to arise again! If thou awakes at the early dawn of the morning and opened thy jaws, stretching out thy red tongue, thou appearest to us to laugh, and, though roaring, yet thou takest thy food playfully from the hands of a woman, from the fingers of a child! So long as we accompanied thee upon thy journeys, so long thy company was important and fruitful to us! To us! to us, quite truly came the food from the eater and sweet refreshments from the strong. Thus it will be no more; Woe! Woe!"

She had not done waiting when riders galloped on down over the middle height of the mountain by the castle, who were immediately recognized as the hunting train of the prince, he himself at their head. They had, while hunting, behind the mountains, seen the clouds of smoke rising up and through dale and ravine, as upon a furious hunting chase, had taken the direct way to this mournful sign. Riding in full speed over the rocky baldness of the hill, they stopped and stared as they perceived the unexpected group, who were notably prominent upon the void plain. At the first recognition they grew mute, and after they had somewhat recovered from it, what the scene did not reveal was explained in a few words. Thus the prince stood before the singular unprecedented event, a circle around him of Knights and followers on foot. He was not undecided at what was to be done; the prince was busied in arranging, in finishing when a man pressed into the circle, very tall, variegated and wonderfully dressed as the woman and child. And now the family manifested together pain and surprise. But the man calm, stood at a respectful distance from the prince and said:

"There is no time to complain. Ah my lord and mighty hunters, the lion also is loose, he too is here in this mountain, but spare him, have pity that he may not die as this good animal."

"The lion said the prince," have you his track?"

"Yes, my lord!" A farmer below there who had unnecessarily run up a tree, directed me up here farther to the left, but I saw the great troop of men and horses before me, curious and needy I hastened hither."

Then, commanded the prince, the hunting party must draw to this side, load your guns, go softly to work, there will be no misfortune if you drive him into the deep woods; but in the end, good man, we shall not be able to spare your creature; why were you so imprudent as to let them escape? "The fire broke out," answered that one, "we kept ourselves still and watchful; it extended quickly but distant from us; we had water enough for our defence, but an explosion took place, and threw the brands to us, and over our heads; we were too hasty, and are now unhappy people."

Yet the prince was busy with ordering, but in a moment everything appeared to stop when a man was seen quickly springing down from above the old castle when they soon recognized as the employed keeper, who watched the workshop of the painter, while he took his habitation in it, and superintended the workmen. He came springing out of breath yet with a few words he had soon made known, that above there the lion had laid himself down behind the high ringwall, in the sunshine, at the foot of a beech tree a hundred years old, and behaved himself quite quietly. But the man angrily concluded. "Why did I yesterday carry my gun in the city, to get it cleaned, he would not rise again, his skin would now be mine, and I might have justly

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

FRIDAY EVENING, DEC. 1, 1881.

The Atlanta Cotton Exposition will close on December 31.

The Legislature has appointed a committee to investigate the management and treatment of convicts in the State prison.

HON. GREEN R. KELLAR, editor of the Bourbon Sun, has been appointed by Speaker Owens, the Enrolling Clerk of the House.

THERE are indications of another trunk railroad line from New York to the West. It will run up the west bank of the Hudson and through the state westward, parallel with, but south of the New York Central. Nearly $40,000,000 have been subscribed to the enterprise.

It is reported on pretty good authority that Dr. Black has recently been trying to "sell out" his road to Huntington. Col. Child has made a careful estimate and finds that another road from Augusta down can be built for $5,000 less than Black's figures.

A SUBJECT that will bring on a fierce fight in the Legislature is the question of repealing the tax of half a cent on the one hundred dollars for the benefit of the State College, at Lexington. The other colleges in the state are bitterly opposed to it and are using their best efforts to secure the repeal.

In the House, on Thursday, Mr. Kehoe was granted leave to bring in a bill to charter the Farmers' Mutual Protection Association of Mason county, and also a bill to amend the charter of the Maysville Agricultural and Mechanical Association of Maysville. They were referred to the committee on Corporate Institutions.

The winter of 1881-82 is already marked by astonishing atmospheric eccentricities, among which may be mentioned the heavy frost and freezes along the gulf coast. Immediately along the coast, in Louisiana, the mercury has already twice fallen to 27 fahrenheit, or 5 degrees below freezing. Great damage has been done to the sugar cane crop; much of it has been frozen and seriously damaged, if not ruined. Another instance of the astonishing severity of the weather for that locality is found in the fact that a man was frozen to death in the streets of San Antonio, Texas, a day or two since. All vegetation throughout the gulf states has suffered materially from the cold wave.

The resources that the big monopolies can bring to bear in a contest are not always measured carefully by these who undertake to wage war upon them. The grocers in Columbus, Ohio wanted to buy oil on better terms than the Standard Oil Company would supply them, and purchased of other refiners. The Standard Company immediately undersold the market. Failing thus to bring the grocers to deal with them, the oil company started in the grocery business and sold goods at cost. This state of things continues. The grocers stand firm, and, with public sympathy on their side, promise to make a hard fight. The temptation to buy cheap groceries in these times of high prices however, is likely to prove too much for the average householders of Columbus, and we fear the grocers will find that the odiousness of the monopoly will not prevent their customers from getting their flour and sugar where they can buy the cheapest. But Ohio would seem to be a good missionary field for the Anti-Monopoly party.

NEWS BREVITIES.

Mr. Emmet G. Logan, of the Courier-Journal, was married to Miss Clara Covington, at Bowling Green.

The Schooner Kate Gillet was lost on Lake Michigan, with all her crew.

At Greencastle Ind., thirteen cars were wrecked and a brakeman killed.

Joseph Krantz was killed by a landslide at Canal Dover, O.

August Kersbare was arrested at Sydney Ohio, for forgery.

There are many cases of small-pox at Bayard, Ohio.

B. T. Ready died suddenly at Jamestown, Ohio.

Keifer, of Ohio, is weakening as a candidate for the speakership, and an effort is now making to consolidate the West on Kasson.

It is understood at Washington that no Southerner is to be in the cabinet.

A memorial tablet is to be erected on the spot where Garfield fell.

W. R. Debow, of Crittenden county, Ky., was found with his neck broken, near Oneida, Tenn. He fell from a train.

Thomas Reed was killed at Allenville, Mo., by an accident in a saw mill.

More agrarian outrages are reported in Ireland, and the shot-gun policy is being vigorously applied to rent-payers.

At Wooster O., Patrick Snyder was fatally injured by falling from a train.

Wholesale burglaries are reported at Cythiana, Ky. Kentucky towns are warned to look out for a visitation.

The body of James Smith, a coal miner at Nelsonville, Ohio, mysteriously missing, was found in a mine. He had committed suicide.

TWO STATES.

KENTUCKY.

The amount of the various funds in the State treasury October 10, 1881, was $247,346.34.

All the State papers insist that it is the duty of the present Legislature to pass an effective dog law.

The governor says charitable institutions of the State have been well and admirably managed.

The Press says there hasn't been a failure in business circles, of any magnitude, in Paducah for several years.

A catamount was killed in Lewis county last week. It measured four feet six inches from nose to tip of tail.

The Progress says that Catlettsburg is "not only the gate, but the golden gate, that opens up the richest valley in the State."

It is reported that General Echols will have five thousand men at work on the Newport & Big Sandy Railroad, by the first of January—that his agents are now in town engaging all the hands and teams they can find. If this is true Maysville will soon have another railroad, and that too without paying any one $100,000 for it.

What They Say About Us.

Augusta (Ky.) Chronicle.

We are in receipt of the DAILY EVENING BULLETIN, published at Maysville and issued by the proprietors of the Maysville WEEKLY BULLETIN. It bespeaks enterprise upon the part of the proprietors, and we wish it abundant success.

A resolution to appoint a committee of five from the Senate and seven from the House to consider all bills relating to the call for a constitutional convention, was adopted by the Kentucky Legislature.

Holiday Directory.

The following are dealers in holiday goods. We cordially recommend them to the patronage of our readers:

A. M. Rogers, boots, shoes, hats, etc.
John Wheeler, oysters, game and good things generally.
F. H. Traxel, the confectioner.
Miss Lou Powling, millinery, etc.

To Business Men.

The success of the BULLETIN as a daily newspaper, we are pleased to say, has far exceeded our most sanguine expectations. A little more than a week old the EVENING BULLETIN is already in favor with more than three hundred of the best people in Maysville, the suburbs and at Aberdeen, and is read every day at their firesides. It is welcomed in the households of men of both political parties for the reason that it is more of a news medium than it is a political journal. Its wide circulation, therefore, in Maysville and the territory tributary, makes it a most valuable vehicle for business announcements, which we respectfully invite to our columns. Our rates of advertising are very low, being less than one-half the charge for the same number of publications in the weekly, and where it is desired to make use of both papers a liberal discount from our regular rates will be given. We assure you that the DAILY BULLETIN affords most excellent facilities for reaching the public ear.

The annual meeting of the Mason County Bible Society will be held in the Third street M. E. Church, on next Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock.

Don't forget that to-morrow is children's day at J. E. Blaine & Co.'s. Every little "fad" in the town is invited and will be made welcome. Come along.

The following combinations are booked to appear at Washington Opera House on the dates named:

Baird's Mammoth Minstrel, Dec. 20th.
Howards Hibernia, Dec. 30 & 31.
Nick Roberts' Humpty Dumpty troupe, Jan. 14th.

It is rumored that $3,750, is the sum paid Capt. Power for the Frank S. Owens. There is another report that $4,250, is the sum to be paid. The Owens takes her departure to-day.

Forty-five head of fat cattle were recently ferried across the river here on the Frank S. Owens at one trip. The average weight of these cattle was 1,200 pounds, making in all 54,000 pounds of beef on board at one time.

The fox hunters below town were out in full force yesterday. Bacon's, Reese's, Pickett's and Marsh's hounds were all in the chase, and poor Reynard had to do some of his best running and play some of his best "tricks." The "boys" intended to continue the chase this morning.

Quite a large crowd assembled at the public landing last evening to witness the immersion of several persons who have lately united with the Baptist church of this city. Rev. J. K. Pace, officiated. Among the number immersed were Misses Anna Ray, Anna Metcalfe, and Master Arthur Glascock.

The New England Opera Company, Thursday evening, gave one of the best entertainments witnessed in this city for years. The laughable opera "Mascot" one of the most popular musical extravaganzas of the day was presented in the best style. The singing of Miss Loraine was especially good and provoked the warmest applause. Our citizens were so well pleased with the performance that a movement is on foot to bring the troupe back again in the early future.

He has the teams of all his tenants, seven altogether, and a force of about forty men at work. When this is completed the grading will be about all done between Twelve Mile and California, Ky.

The case of Griffith vs. Cox, etc., in the Court of Appeals, from this county has been reversed. Judge Hargis delivered the opinion:

First—No sale, mortgage or assignment by a debtor so long as he is solvent can be held to operate as an assignment of all his estate to his creditors.

Second—In a proceeding to have a transfer of property declared to have been made in contemplation of insolvency and to operate as an assignment for the benefit of creditors the debtor can not be deprived of the remainder of his property by placing it in the hands of a receiver until it shall have been decided that the sale, mortgage or assignment was made with the design, alleged.
